"Billions" is a gripping drama TV series created by Brian Koppelman, David Levien, and Andrew Ross Sorkin that premiered on January 17, 2016, on Showtime. The show revolves around the cat-and-mouse game between U.S. Attorney Chuck Rhoades, played by Paul Giamatti, and billionaire hedge fund manager Bobby Axelrod, played by Damian Lewis. With 7 seasons and 84 episodes, the series explores themes of power, finance, and complex moralities, featuring a talented ensemble cast.

As Taylor Mason aptly puts it, "Human Beings Can't Command Math. You Can't Bend It To Your Will. It Doesn't Exist To Satisfy You." The show received positive reviews from critics, with an overall approval rating of 86% on Rotten Tomatoes, praising its realistic portrayal of the hedge fund industry and representation of the LGBTQ community. You can stream "Billions" on various platforms, including Paramount+, Showtime, Hulu, and Amazon Prime Video.

Scammed and Silenced: Narendra Mishra's Story!

On June 28, 2025, a 63-year-old retired bank cashier from Lucknow, Narendra Kumar Mishra, fell victim to a sophisticated "digital arrest" scam. Fraudsters posing as officers from the Jammu & Kashmir ATS accused him of espionage and claimed he had leaked classified information to Pakistan. Over a series of coercive WhatsApp video calls—some featuring imposters dressed as UP ATS officials—they threatened him with arrest under the National Security Act and demanded money to "settle" the case. Terrified and isolated, Mishra transferred ₹10.99 lakh on July 1 to an account in Haryana and another ₹17.45 lakh on July 4 to a Mumbai-based account, losing a total of ₹28 lakh. He was instructed not to speak to anyone, effectively placing him under psychological house arrest. The fraud came to light when he finally contacted a relative, who helped him file an FIR at the Gomtinagar Cyber Crime Police Station around July 25. Police are now investigating the case, which reflects a growing trend of scams using fake authority and digital intimidation to exploit elderly victims.

STORY TIME

The Victory of Courage – A Tale of Kargil Vijay Diwas

July 26, 1999 a date etched in every Indian heart marks the historic victory of the Indian Armed Forces during the Kargil War. More than a military success, it was a testament to courage, sacrifice, and unwavering patriotism. Among the brave was Captain Aarav Sharma, who stood on the harsh terrain of Kargil uniform torn, heart heavy, yet spirit unbroken. Weeks earlier, he and his battalion laughed together at base camp, unaware of the battles ahead. As Operation Vijay unfolded, they climbed icy cliffs under enemy fire, driven by their love for the nation. "We fight not because we hate what's in front of us, but because we love what's behind us," Aarav had said words that echoed through every step of their mission. On July 26, the Indian Army reclaimed every inch of our land, and the Tricolour soared over Tiger Hill and Tololing a sunrise of freedom earned through grit and glory.
